ABSTRACT

In the article discusses the definition of the principles of teaching preschool children. As we know, teaching and upbringing, the original aspects of a single process have their own composition, their own specific methods, their material and psychological prerequisites. In the early stages of a child's life, education and upbringing act in a closer unity, and it is difficult to differentiate them, but as the child grows up, upbringing and education become more and more clearly differentiated. But this does not mean at all that teaching loses its educational power, and education ceases to be teaching. Preschool education is an integral part and the first link in a unified system of continuous education, where the foundations of the personality are being formed.

Keywords: preschool education, definition of principles, system of continuing education.
